Boring through a floor with an auger constitutes burglary, says the Alabama Supreme Court, in Walker against State.—This was where the prisoner bored a hole through the door of a corn-crib, stopped it up with a cob, and afterward, on a separate occasion, drew the shelled corn out of the crib into sacks. A farm overseer is not a "laborer," within the lien law. Notes, bills, etc., representing money loaned on interest by a corporation, are "property" liable to taxation. A railroad depot is a "warehouse, within the statute of burglary. A supervising architect is a person performing "labor," although not a "laborer," within the meaning of the mechanics' lien law. A widow keeping a boarding-house with a female friend residing with her, and female servants, besides the boarders, is the "head of a family." But a single man, who keeps house and has no other person living with him than servants and employees, is not the "head of a family" or a "householder." And an unmarried man, who does not keep house, but supports his mother and unmarried sister, who boards with his married sister in another town, is not the "head of a family."

Japan runners will take a gin-rik-sha—a baby carriage, large enough to hold a full grown person, and travel a mile in six minutes. They will take you 8 miles in 53 minutes. Irving M. Scott, of the Union Foundry, San Francisco, says:

"We were curious to test this, and we did with a pedometer. We tried it two miles, and the instrument so recorded it. When it had recorded eight miles we had been 53 minutes in making it. It is the most exhilarating way of riding I ever experienced."

THE MEANEST MAN.—A Boston lady who joined her husband in his new Western home was surprised to find that among the young ladies he had the reputation of being "the meanest man that ever was." Wishing to know the reason, she asked a bevy of damsels, when one them spitefully replied: "Because he came here, looking spruce and young, and went on until all the girls got interested in him, and then sent for you! And that was the first we knew he was married! Mean! I guess so!"

Woman tempted man to eat, but he took to drinking on his own account.

Crape on the Door.

ung one has gone from this strange world of ours,
to mother its thorns with its flowers,
to move to fingers where sunbeams must fade,
here on all beauty death's fingers are laid!

"There's crape on the door!"
A mother going by with her darling voluntarily tightens her grasp of the little hand, as she sees the banner of death fanned so near, and the boy feels the pressure and says:

"What is it, mamma?"

"Some one is dead, Willie!"

"What does 'dead' mean?"

The mother looks about her for an answer to the child's question.

"It means—it means—why, Willie, remember when your little sister died and was cold, and we buried her under the grass—"

"And then?" queried the child.

"Then she went to heaven."

"Where is heaven?"

"It is where God is, my dear."

"Mamma, who made God?"

Poor child! his thoughtless question finds no more satisfactory answers than the researches into an older theology which we so vainly agonize, and at last remain contented with his limited knowledge that some one is dead and the custom to put crape on the door, a custom beautiful in itself, influenced until if we look upon the insignia of hope and glad acquiescence in the summons to rest.

One of the saints, from sorrow and sin,
[illegible] who [illegible] entered not in;
But moved onward to heaven's bright shore;
And the bells flung their echoes upon the door.

We do not clap our hands and joyously, for it is the winner of immortality." No! We start and walk with slow step and bated breath, as the presence of crape meets our eyes, and shudder instinctively in the bright sunshine. The green leaves are coming, flowers will bloom, the birds will sing, and the heart throb with the fullness of life

Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath,
And stars to set—but all
Thou hast, all seasons, for thine own, O Death!

Custom has decreed that we shall thus inform the passer-by that death is present, and the solemn badge of the shadowy ambassador guards the portal from all idle intrusion. No social visits are paid to the house that shows the insign; no call of ceremony is made while that guest is present; nor do people linger idly in the vicinity of the house that is thus set apart from its neighbors.

The somber fall of black crape on the door assures us that one of mature years has "passed over," but for a young person or a little child, white—the emblem of purity—is used, but it tells the same sad story:

Weary with mingling life's bitter and sweet,
Weary with pain, and never to meet,
Some one has gone to the bright golden shore.
Ring the bell softly, there's crape on the door.

Ears.

Large ears can hear things in general and denote broad, comprehensive views and modes of thought, while small ears hear things in particular, showing a disposition to individualize, often accompanied by love of the minute. Large ears are usually satisfied with learning the facts of a case, with the general principles involved—too strict an attention to the enumeration of details, especially all repetition of the more unimportant, is wearisome to them. People with such ears like generally, and are usually well fitted, to conduct large enterprises, to receive and pay out large sums; in buying or selling would prefer to leave a margin rather than reduce the quantity of any sort to the exact dimensions of the measure specified, and in giving would prefer to give with a free hand and without too strict a calculation as to the exact amount. Small ears, on the contrary, desire to know the particulars of a story as well as the main facts, take delight often in examining, handling or constructing tiny specimens of workmanship; are disposed to be exact with respect to inches and ounces in buying or selling—to the extent, at least, of knowing the exact number over or under the stated measure given or received. People with such ears would, in most cases, prefer a retail to a wholesale business.—Phrenological Journal.

HOW TO GET RICH.—Nothing is more easy than to grow rich—it is simply to trust nobody, to befriend none, to get everything, and save all you get. To stint self, and everybody connected with you. To be a friend of no man and have no man your friend. To charge interest upon interest and cent upon cent. To be mean, miserable, and despised for some twenty or thirty years; and riches will come as sure as disease and disappointment, and when misery, nearly enough wealth is secured by the disregard of all the charities of the human heart, and at the expense of every enjoyment, save that of wallowing in filthy meanness, death comes to finish the work, the body is buried in a hole, the heirs dance over it, and, if he had one, where goes the soul? Bright picture for the rich; but it must be right, because it is respectable to be rich.

"Do you love me?" "Yes," she answered, "better than anything else in the world. It's a beautiful night for a moonlight drive." A moonlight drive would cost $3, and as he agitated the 15 cents in his right trouser's pocket, he surveyed the lunar orb with a knowing gaze, and said: "I should be so happy to take you, but it is a wet moon, and you know you are so liable to catch cold, my dear." The next morning the disappointed maiden observed to her mother: "Charley and I have quit. He knows a heap about the weather, but he's a perfect ignoramus about me."

FORMATION OF CLOUDS.

Interesting Facts in Physical Science.

Whence comes the rain which forms the mountain streams? Observation enables you to answer the question. Rain does not come from a clear sky. It comes from clouds. But what are clouds? Is there nothing you are acquainted with which they resemble? You discover at once a likeness between them and the condensed steam of a locomotive. At every puff of the engine a cloud is projected into the air. Watch the cloud sharply; you notice that it first forms at a little distance from the top of the funnel. Give close attention, and you will sometimes see a perfectly clear space between the funnel and the cloud. Through that clear space the thing which makes the cloud must pass. What, then, is this thing which at one moment is transparent and invisible and the next moment visible as a dense, opaque cloud?

It is the steam or vapor of water from the boiler. Within the boiler this steam is transparent and invisible; but to keep it in this invisible state a heat would be required as great as that within the boiler. When the vapor mingles with the cold air above the hot funnel it ceases to be vapor. Every bit of steam shrinks, when chilled, to a much more minute particle of water. The liquid particles thus produced form a kind of water-dust of exceeding fineness, which floats in the air. This is a cloud. Watch the cloud-banner from the funnel of a locomotive; you see it growing gradually less dense. It finally melts away altogether; and, if you continue your observations, you will not fail to notice that the speed of its disappearance depends upon the character of the day. In humid weather the cloud hangs low and lazily in the air; in dry weather it is rapidly licked up. What has become of it? It has been reconverted into the invisible vapor.

The drier the air, and the hotter the air, the greater is the amount of cloud which can be thus dissolved in it. When the cloud first forms, its quantity is too great than the air is able to maintain in an invisible state. But as the cloud mixes gradually with a larger mass of air it is more and more dissolved, and finally passes altogether from the condition of a finely-divided liquid into that of transparent vapor gas.

Make the lid of a kettle air-tight, and permit the steam to issue from the pipe, a cloud is precipitated in all respects similar to that issuing from the funnel of the locomotive.

Permit the steam as it issues from the pipe to pass through the flame of a spirit-lamp, the cloud is instantly dissolved by the heat, and is not again precipitated. With a special boiler and a special nozzle, the experiment may be made more striking, but not more instructive, than with the kettle.

Look to your bedroom windows when the weather is very cold outside; they sometimes stream with water derived from the condensation of the aqueous vapor from your own lungs. The windows of railway carriages in winter show this condensation in a striking manner. Pour cold water into a dry drinking-glass on a summer's day; the outside surface of the glass becomes instantly dimmed by the precipitation of moisture. On a warm day you notice no vapor in front of your mouth, but on a cold day you form there a little cloud derived from the condensation of the aqueous vapor from the lungs.

You may notice in a ball-room that as the door and windows are kept close and the room remains hot, the air remains clear; but when the doors or windows are opened, a dimness is visibly caused by the precipitation to fog of the aqueous vapor of the ball-room. If the weather be intensely cold, the entrance of fresh air may even cause snow to fall. This has been observed in Russian ball-rooms, and also in the subterranean stables at Erzeroom, when the doors are opened and the cold morning air is permitted to enter.

Even on the driest day this vapor is never absent from the atmosphere. The vapor diffused through the air of a room may be congealed to hoar frost in your presence. This is done by filling a vessel with a mixture of pounded ice and salt, which is condensed and freezes the aqueous vapor. The surface of the vessel is finally coated with a frozen fur, so thin that it may be scraped away and formed into a snow-ball.

To produce the cloud, in the case of the locomotive and the kettle, heat is necessary. By heating the water, we first convert it into steam, and then, by chilling the steam, we convert it into cloud. Is there any fire in nature which produces the clouds of our atmosphere? There is, the fire of the sun.

Thus, by tracing backward without any break in the chain of occurrences, our river from its end to its real beginnings, we come at length to the sun.

TORTURING BY ELECTRICITY.

The Agony Which the Killers of the Czar Were Compelled to Undergo.

Russakoff and Jaliboff, the killers of the Czar of Russia, were mercilessly put to torture. Russakoff was electrified by powerful batteries, and forced by the intolerable agony he suffered to answer the questions put to him.

Park Benjamin, the scientific expert, said to a New York reporter: "The idea of torturing criminals by electricity is not original with the Russians. It is a British invention, and was first suggested about five years ago by an English mechanical journal, in commenting upon the execution of criminals by electric shock instead of by hanging. The English writer wanted to do away with the cat-o'-nine-tails, which is administered in England to garroters and other criminals of certain classes, and use the electric battery, as he somewhat grimly expressed it, so as to produce absolutely indescribable torture, unaccompanied by wounds or even bruises, thrilling through every fiber of such miscreants. There was an American inventor who had a design for inflicting this species of punishment. He fitted brackets of iron on the arms and thighs of the criminal, and placed in them wet sponges. When connected with a current of electricity, the shock would by this system pass through the legs and shoulders, and avoid the vital parts of the body.

"The torture inflicted by electricity is of two kinds—by contraction of the muscles at rapidly-recurring intervals and by burning with sparks. The tortures of old days, when not done by fire or compression, were the straining and tearing asunder of the muscles. Of this kind were the rack, scavenger's daughter and the cages of Louis XIV., in which a man could not stand up or lie down. This electric shock exactly reverses these conditions. It produces an enormously-rapid contraction in the body of the muscles at very short intervals. The degree of pain produced is about the same. The force of the electricity has to be nicely graded, as a too-powerful shock would numb or kill a man.

"The other method is by condensing a number of intermittent sparks on the flesh. This burns the skin, and at the same time produces contractions of the muscles. If put to the side of the jaw it would make every tooth ache."

A distinguished surgeon, of whom questions were asked concerning the machine, said: "The best way to explain it is to give you actual experience: then you will know exactly how it feels. Here is a Faradic induction coil. I pull out this tube a little way. Now, let me place this electrode in your hand. There."

"Oh!" exclaimed the inquirer, as a tingling, thrilling sensation ran through every finger, and his hand closed in an involuntary grasp.

"Does it hurt?" asked the doctor.

"A little."

"Well, we'll try again. Now, you see, I pull this tube further out. I again touch it to your hand and—"

"Whoop!" shouted the victim; "take it away!"

The feeling was as if the hand was crushed in a vise. Every nerve ached and trembled with pain.

"That hurt, did it? Why, that's nothing. Here's something of a very different sort."

He fastened to one wire a small wet sponge, and to the other wire something like a paint-brush, with the brush part made of fine wire. He put the sponge in the visitor's hand and then touched the back of the hand with the wire brush. The pain was unbearable. The surface of the skin was scorched and the muscles of the hand were contracted in a violent manner.

"That is called the electric scourge," said the doctor. "If it were dark you could see sparks fly from each wire. Imagine the effect if the electricity were ten times more powerful."

"Could any man bear that torture?"

"I think not; any man would confess under it, but it is a question what confidence could be placed in such a confession. A man would confess anything to escape the agony."

"What could you compare the pain to?"

"It would be the same as burning alive."

"Would it injure the man?"

"No; not unless the pain drove him insane. If the battery was too powerful it would kill at once. Applied to some parts of the body the scourge hurts more than on other parts."

"WHY do you let that waiter blow the foam off your beer?" asked a friend of Poots. "because," said Poots, modestly, "I don't like to blow my own horn."

THE PRESIDENT.

On Tuesday morning the President was comfortably removed from Washington to Long Branch, and since his arrival at that famous Summer resort he has been gradually improving. To-day his pulse is 104; temperature 98-8; respiration 18. His condition continues to improve, and he is gradually gaining in strength; He sleeps well without the aid of opiates. His wound looks well, and the parotid swelling is rapidly diminishing.

ANOTHER INDIAN WAR.

The Government's proteges, its licensed murderers, the noble red man, the Apaches of Arizona, are again murdering our people in that Territory, having opened their murderous campaign by the killing of an army officer and several privates through the treachery of their Indian scouts. Arizona promises to be the scene of the heaviest Indian war the country has recently had on its hands, as the Apaches are terrible fighters, and are not likely to cry for peace until compelled to do so by overpowering numbers and the force of arms. All the available troops in the Department of the Pacific have gone to the front, and we will soon hear of bloody doings in that section. Congress should pass an Indian War Act to authorize the acceptance by the War Department of a requisite number of volunteer regiments of sharpshooters, to go into an Indian campaign untrammeled by the red tape of the War and Interior Departments. The Pacific States and Territories are filled with old mountaineers, sharpshooters and Indian hunters, who would quickly fill up such regiments and hunt down the red devils in their very strongholds. The people are tiring of the humane system of dealing with these murderers, who are kept on the best the market affords and fattened during the Winter at Government expense, and in the Spring are supplied with arms and ammunition, that they may hunt during the Summer the —white man! They are but brutes, bloodthirsty beasts, bearing the shape and semblance of man; and a war of extermination should be waged against them just as strongly as we would hunt down a pack of wolves. The life of one American citizen is of more value than all the Indian carcasses on the continent, and, if necessary, to preserve that life, every Indian in the country should be made to bite the dust. This war will end as the rest have. When Winter sets in they will "come in," be forgiven, and provisions and blankets will be furnished them, and in the Spring they will be in good condition for another murderous raid.

The Los Angeles new State scheme don't pan out well. The Convention at Los Angeles this week was a lamentable failure, only two or three counties being represented. The Republican County Committee of Ventura passed resolutions denouncing the scheme, and the Ventura Press strongly opposes it. The Convention adjourned till February 22d, in the hope that more interest will be taken in the scheme by that date.

Two fresh numbers of the Nihilist journal, Will of the People, dated August 3d and 4th, have appeared in St. Petersburg, in the form of supplements, promising the publication of a full number at the beginning of September. The numbers issued contain various notices warning spies of their fate; a list of donations to the revolutionary fund, amounting to $5,000 roubles; list of four hundred Nihilists arrested since November, and an article condemning the Czar's policy and threatening to deal the enemy a final blow.

FOR SUPREME JUDGE.

Next year a Supreme Judge of this State is to be elected, and already the newspapers in many of the counties are naming their candidates for the position. We think we can name a gentleman who could go into a Republican State Convention at this early day with a goodly backing, and the longer the delay in making nominations, the stronger will he be as a candidate. Our candidate is a young man, who possesses a well-balanced legal mind that is never clouded through the use of the "social" glass; a mind that is active and quick to grasp a legal point and deal with it intelligently. We have had too many Supreme Judges who "indulge" too freely, and whose brains were too muddled to act intelligently on the important questions that drift before that great tribunal, and perhaps those on the Supreme Bench at this writing are not all exempt from this failing—in fact some of their decisions would make one think that they are not, although all may be temperate men; but be that as it may, it is patent to all that our present Supreme Court is far from being the most popular branch of our State Government, and as their terms expire they will probably be retired to private life and new men elected to take their places; and it is in view of this state of affairs that we name Hon. M. P. Wiggin, one of the Superior Judges of Mono county; a gentleman who has given general satisfaction on the Bench. He has, by order of Governor Perkins, presided over the Superior Court of several counties with credit to himself, and to the satisfaction of all who have been in litigation in those courts, and we believe if he could receive the Republican nomination for Supreme Judge he would be elected, and his judicial course would meet the approval of the people.

The Admission of California.

Yesterday, September 9th, was "Admission Day"—California having been admitted into the Union on the 9th day of September, 1850. The anniversary of that event is celebrated with more than ordinary interest on account of the remarkable manner of its admission. California demanded admittance during a critical period of the slavery agitation, and to Henry Clay and Stephen A. Douglas are we indebted for its early admission, as a vigorous attempt was made to divide the Territory at 36 degrees and 30 minutes—the northern portion to be free and the southern slave territory—the Southerners advocating it en masse, Jeff Davis being a leading spirit against the State. After a long discussion and bitter fight, the Senate passed the bill, August 13th, by a vote of 34 to 18—the nays being Southern. In the House, September 9th, 1850, by 150 to 56—the latter all Southern. By Act of Legislature the day is a legal holiday, and the National Guard has its annual parade.

In Buffalo George Leonard Smith, in company with two other young men and two girls, entered the generating room of the Brush Electric Light Company, and looked at the machinery. He wanted to experiment, and he was allowed to try a harmless one, which consisted in taking hold of one of the brushes attached to the commutator, in which the electricity is held until distributed over the wires, and then taking hold of the hands of his companions, a gentle current of electricity was passed through their bodies. He wanted to take hold of two of the brushes, but the manager warned him that it was instant death. They then retired, but in a few minutes he returned, seemingly intoxicated. He leaned over the railing which keeps outsiders at a distance from the machinery, and, before a warning word could be said, he grabbed the first and third brushes. The manager jumped for him, but was too late. His hands stuck fast to the brushes, and, giving the word to stop he engine, he took hold of Smith and tried to pull him from his hold. This he was unable to do, but as soon as the engine stopped, Smith raised himself to his feet, and, throwing up his arms, gave a loud gasp and expired instantly. It was done so quickly that those who witnessed it could scarcely believe their eyes. The victim's face had a pale bluish tint and was drawn out of shape. His hands were badly burned, and on several of his fingers the flesh was burned to the bone. The generator is of tremendous power, and would kill fifty thousand men as easily as one.

A late London paper says that Queen Victoria has no wish to have her name associated with whisky. An enterprising American whisky manufacturer, it appears, recently sent the Queen "A beautiful barrel of the best distilled waters of Kentucky," which he called Victoria Whisky. He hoped thus to obtain an advertisement out of Her Majesty, but the Queen showed good sense by refusing it.

The sand business in Albany, N. Y., is of considerable importance. The Albany sand is the finest in the United States for iron castings, and large quantities are annually shipped to California.

BRIDGEPORT, SEPTEMBER 10, 1881.

JOB PRINTING.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

STILL ANOTHER.—Selling liquor to Indians does not seem to abate in Bodie, notwithstanding several men have been convicted of that offense and sent to the county jail. Last week one was sent here to spend part of the Winter; and on Monday last A. Govein,, a Mexican, was sent down for 180 days for this offense. The last boarder is not a desirable one, he being a fit subject for the hospital and for the Stockton Asylum. It is a greater punishment to the taxpayers than to the culprits, who have comfortable Winter quarters and live on the best the Big Meadows afford. The Bodie 601 should organize a tar bucket brigade for such offenders, who should be ordered out of the county.

A GREAT SACRIFICE.—The real estate and personal property of the Mammoth Mining Company recently sold by Sheriff Showers went for less than a "song." As a sample we may cite: 50 tons of soda sold for $1 a ton, and 32½ ton of salt brought $2 50 for the lot. The real estate—mine, etc., brought only $15.100; and the personal property, which was worth tens of thousands, brought only $7,211 88—and that is the way everything goes in a dead mining camp. The mine was bid in by the Bank of California; but the personal property was sold to different parties, the Bodie Tunnel Company being a large purchaser.

SUPERIOR COURT.—The Superior Court, Department No. 2, Hon. M. P. Wiggin, Judge, presiding, will open on Monday next, the 12th. There are 5 motions to be heard, and eight cases to be set. On the same day a case on appeal will also be tried. On Tuesday the case of Gillespie vs. Page, Wheaton & Co., et al., will be tried before a jury. On Wednesday the case of Mrs. Nellie M. Smith et al. vs. Goodshaw Mining Co., will be tried before a jury. Several motions that could not be heard before, owing to the absence of the Judges, will be disposed of during the week.

A BUSY WEEK.—Judge Wiggin having returned home, next week promises to be a busy one in the Court House; and as there will be several jury trials the town generally will be somewhat enlivened through the presence of many of our fellow citizens of Bodie, Lundy and Antelope. It is a long while since they enjoyed a visit to the Capital, and we have no doubt they will bless the Sheriff's deputies for this golden opportunity to inhale the aroma of the new mown hay of the Big Meadows

THE SCHOOL TAX. The school tax election takes place on Tuesday next, when the people of Bridgeport School District will decide whether they will sustain the Trustees in the levying of a special tax of $700 to keep the school running during the coming Winter. All good people should vote "yes," and consequently we do not expect to hear of any negative votes being cast.

A BIG JOB.—Jessee N. Summers, of this town, has contracted to haul fifty tons of soda and 32½ tons of salt, recently sold by Sheriff Showers at the Mammoth Mill, at Mammoth City, to Bodie. Mr. Summers has put two 20-horse teams on the road to do the hauling. The teams will probably be engaged till December, or till the snow flies, in hauling the Mammoth personal effects to Bodie.

LUMBER CONTRACTS.—N. B. Hunewill, of the Eagle Mills, Bridgeport, has contracted to furnish the lumber for the Bodie Tunnel Co.'s new mill, and for the Bodie sewer. Those contemplating improvements before the setting in of Winter should send in their orders at once to Mr. Hunewill, who will start up his mills on Monday next.

ADMISSION DAY.—Yesterday "Old Glory" proudly waved over the Court House in honor of Admission Day. Governor Perkins having, by proclamation, declared it a legal holiday, business at the Court House was generally suspended. Bryant's venerable flag was also thrown to the breeze over the Postoffice.

PERSONAL.—Judge M. P. Wiggin and wife arrived home to-day.

Andy Allen has been rusticating in Bodie for a few days.

Judge Leavitt and Wm. T. Elliott are doing Lundy. Mono Lake and adjacent country.

DISCHARGED.—Yesterday morning Sheriff Showers discharged two of his boarders—Rowe and Barton—whose terms had expired.

SPECIAL JURORS.—Judge Wiggin has ordered a venire of forty jurors, returnable on Tuesday next, to try civil cases.

THROUGH.—Our farmers are generally through with their harvest, and will have leisure to enjoy the fruits of their toil.

A. B. Stewart, Druggist, Bodie, has drugs, medicines, paints, oils, ammunition and cartridges.

THE WEATHER.—The weather this week has been fine.

Don't forget to vote on Tuesday for a school tax,

Sept. 8.

Sept. 9.

Annie J. Parker to Frank Higgins: lot on Main street, west of Bryant's store; $300.

THE OASIS.—Inadvertently we neglected to notice in our last issue The Oasis, Hawthorne's new paper, edited by Dan. E. Jones, well known throughout our county as "The Bentonian Man." Jones' new venture presents a neat appearance and is well filled with local news, and if the people of Hawthorne do not give it a cordial and liberal support they will deserve to be unknown by the outside world. Dan has our best wishes.

HOMER INDEX.—Since John I. Ginn assumed control of the Homer Index it has been much improved, and the people of Lundy have a worthy representative of their local interests, and we are pleased to learn that they appreciate it.

PINE NUTTING.—The Indians are busily engaged in gathering pine nuts, which accounts for the scarcity of the woodchopping fraternity. The pine nut crop is very heavy this year, and the Lo family will have a bountiful harvest.

Three years ago, at Kernville, Kern county, a man named Green, a dissolute character, sold his body to Dr. Johnson for $7 50. On the 20th of August Green died at Havilah, and, upon being notified of the fact, Dr. Johnson took the body to Kernville, divested the bones of the flesh, and is arranging the framework of his purchase for future use.

HOUSE AND FARM.

A COLD BATH IN WINTER.—Among the young and robust there are a large number who are able to bathe even in the depths of Winter; the advantage of so doing is, however, questionable. But let it be once well-understood what a cold bath really is, and the course by which they can avoid Scylla and Charybdis will be obvious. A cold bath, says The Lancet, is not necessarily a bath in water of the temperature of the atmosphere. A bath is truly and really cold when it produces a certain physiological effect—a slight momentary shock followed by pleasant and lasting reaction. These good effects are for a majority of people most pleasantly obtained by bathing in water about thirty-five to forty degrees below the temperature of the body—the usual temperature of unheated water in June and July. Bearing this in mind, people can enjoy their physiological "cold" bath as safely and pleasantly at Christmas as at midsummer, and there is no necessity for the most timid or weakly to discontinue his morning bath because the Summer is over. When the water sinks below the temperature of sixty degrees, let it be heated to that point and then used, and there will still be a "cold" bath, though of heated water.

The daily stimulant effect of such a bath is so beneficial to the great majority of persons, and is of such marked service in maintaining health, that it is important to have it widely known that a cold bath may be taken all the year round, provided cold is not mistaken to mean "at the temperature of the outer air." To heat the bath during the Winter months is too often thought to be unmanly, while in reality it is scientific, and to bath in unheated water all the year round, whatever the temperature of that water may be, is to prove self an ignorant slave of outward circumstances.

Many who have all their lives been fond of porterhouse steaks, have no knowledge of the origin of that designation. They were first cut about the year 1814, in the old Fly Narket in New York city. One Morrison kept a porter-house near by, and was accustomed to buy his meat of Thos. Gibbons in the market. Becoming accidentally acquainted with the excellent qualities of steak cut from the small end of the sirloin, which was then only used for roasting, he fell into the way of buying them, and no others, for his famous port-r house, and so Mr. Gibbons every morning ordered "the porterhouse stakes" to be cut, and in time the cut came to be known as "porterhouse" all through Fly Market, and eventually through all other markets in the country.

When grass land gets run out, as the phrase goes, the best way to renew it, unless it is very rocky or rough land, is to break it up, and, if it is not available or desirable for cultivation, to manure heavily and reseed. This month is the best time for breaking up sod. It can then be manured, thoroughly harrowed and reseeded with grass the last of the month. In sowing only those kinds should be sown together that mature together. Herdsgrass and red top go well together, but orchard grass, June grass and the other early varieties should be sown by themselves. Twelve quarts of herdsgrass and three pecks of red top make a very good seeding for an acre. If herdsgrass is sown alone on very heavy land it should be sown more thickly, so that it will not grow too rank and coarse. Orchard grass should be sown very thickly or it will grow in clumps. A bushel and a half or two bushels of seed to the acre give a good result.

When fattening an animal for beef let the process be as quick as possible. Any stint in feeding will make the meat tough and dry. Stall-fed animals will more readily than others, and young animals require richer food than older ones. In fattening in Winter depends much upon the warmth of the stable. The warmer the cattle are kept, the less food they require.

Flies will soon disappear from a room containing a plate of the following mixture: Half a teaspoonful of black pepper, one of brown sugar and one of cream mixed together.

To spice grapes, to one peck take 3½ pounds of sugar, pint of vinegar, two ounces of ground cinnamon, one of ground cloves, and stew slowly for two hours.

A little cayenne pepper occasionally dropped into fresh water is a good tonic for old or young fowls.

For raisin pie, take one cup of chopped raisins, one of sour, fresh cream, one of sugar, and one egg. Bake with two crusts.

Cream of tartar rubbed upon soiled white kid gloves cleans them well.

Experience has caused it to be remarked that in the country where the laws are gentle, the minds of the citizens are struck by it, as it is elsewhere by the most severe.

It is quite wonderful how many things there are in the world which you do not want, if you can only make yourself think so.

No grander thing can a man do than to give a helping hand to a young man who has been discouraged.

Success is duty, whether duty is success or not.

Charity is a first mortgage on every human being's possessions.

He who can suppress a moment's anger may prevent a day of sorrow.

When you confer a benefit on a man, you spoil it if you ever after speak of it.

Hope is like the sun, which as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.
